- 95 Occupational Groups (two-digit code numbers)
- 512 Occupational Families (three-digit code numbers)

INTRODUCTION

1. The Revised edition of the National Classification of Occupations, N.C.O., 1968, has been fashioned after the second edition of the International Standard Classification of Occupations, (I.S.C.O.), 1966; published by the International Labour Organisation, I.L.O., in 1968. This has been done to ensure international comparability of reporting and analysing of statistical data relating to occupations, manpower, population censuses, etc. The National Classification of Occupations, N.C.O.-1968, was adopted for 1971 and 1981 censuses.

2. Basic Principles in Revising N.C.O.

2.1 In an occupational classification, the grouping of occupations has to be based on the fundamental criterion of 'type of work performed'. Accordingly, occupations have been classified, in the N.C.O., 1968, so that all the workers engaged on the same type of work are grouped together irrespective of the industrial classification of establishments where they are engaged. For example, all clerical workers have been classified in one occupational group; whether they are engaged in a factory, mine, government office or even a shop. Similarly, drivers have been grouped together, so also production process workers and those engaged in services, etc. The branch of economic activity (industry), in which a job occurs, has, thus, not affected the classification of occupations in the N.C.O. Effort has consequently been made to avoid the use of titles similar to those used in the Standard Industrial Classification, in order that there may be no difficulty in distinguishing between an industry and an occupation. Nevertheless, some Groups or Families had to be described in words similar to those used for industrial classification for want of better terminology or nomenclature. For example :

Group 36 : Transport and Communication Supervisors

Group 77 : Food and Beverage Processors

- Group 23 : Directors and Managers, Financial Institutions ;
- Group 24 : Working Proprietors, Directors and Managers, Mining, Construction, Manufacturing and Related Concerns
- Group 25 : Working Proprietors, Directors, Managers and Related Executives, Transport, Storage and Communication

2.2 By and large, factors like materials handled, tools or machines used, standard of performance required, levels of responsibility involved, physical and social environments, industrial affiliations, and other abstract or associated factors (e.g. level of intelligence, manual dexterity, physical strength, initiative, adaptability, ability to supervise, level of education, vocational training, etc.) have not affected the grouping or classification of occupations. Nevertheless, an occupational classification has to take into account not only the type of operations involved in the performance of a job but also factors like the types of qualifications, vocational and professional training, status (e.g. own-account worker, employer) and levels of skill. Thus, while relating Occupations to one another in a Family, not only the general similarity of characteristics of work performed is determined, but also the qualifications and levels of skill required. Further grouping of occupational Families into an occupational Group is similarly based on affinity between such Families inter se in terms of raw materials, equipment, process and techniques used, as well as the environments (factory, laboratory, office, etc.) where the work is performed. An Occupational Division is essentially a convenient basis for combining homogenous Groups of Occupations,

2.3 Obviously, the fundamental criterion (viz., 'type of work performed') is easier to be applied at the 5-digit level of occupations. For the inclusion of 5-digit occupations in 3-digit Families and 2-digit Groups, this basic criterion has to be interpreted in a broad sense only. This implies that the more detailed the level of subdivision, the more homogenous will be the content of occupations in a Family or Group from the point of view of 'type of work performed'.

2.4 N.C.O., 1968 attempts to group together occupations according to combinations of specific duties, tasks and work functions concerned with, while actually performing the same or closely related work. Consequently, job-definitions or descriptions given in N.C.O. represent only the average national picture of the various occupations. There could, thus, be variations in job-combinations or job breakdowns, as also differences in job-titles of occupations, from establishment to establishment and State to State. Further, it is recognised, as only natural, that a group of persons engaged on the same occupation may inter se vary widely in such characteristics as level of performance, education, institutional training, etc. Therefore, even though the revised definitions do not describe the level of education, training or work experience required for efficient performance of the tasks and functions in an occupation, broad inferences regarding qualifications etc. could be drawn from occupational grouping and indeed from the job description.

2.5 N.C.O., 1968 endeavours, hopefully, to standardise occupational nomenclature and average job-descriptions to couch the data and literature relating to various occupations, produced on an all-India basis, in commonly understood and comparable terminology. It may not be out of place to mention that in its application to the classification of population and individuals, there will always be two alternatives—an employed person may be classified according to the type of work he performs or according to the type of work for which he is qualified. Similarly, an unemployed person may be classified by the type of work for which he is trained or qualified or by the type of work he is looking for. In practice, however, the administrative departments conducting population census or assisting employment-seekers in job-seeking may apply either of the two alternatives to ensure uniformity of its (N.C.O.'s) applicability.

2.6 The National Classification of Occupations NCO-1968 issued by the Directorate General of Employment & Training consists of

- 8 Divisions (at one-digit level);
- 95 Groups (at two-digit level);
- 465 Families (at three-digit level)

2.7 The office of the Registrar General and Census Commissioner for India have adopted NCO-1968 at the 1991 census with certain modifications. There is no change at the Division (one-digit) and Group (two-digit) level of classification but changes have been made at three-digit level of classification to accommodate certain occupations pursued by Scheduled Castes and Scheduled Tribes by splitting the existing families of NCO-1968. There are now 512 Families in the NCO-1968 adopted by the office of the Registrar General & Census Commissioner for India. Thus, in all 47 new Families have been added. The new families introduced in the NCO-1968 are given below :—
